Free Ideas

A place where your Ideas can be Free

Free Ideas

The project

FreeIdeas is a web application where anyone can publish their ideas. Ideas can cover any topic, without having to be feasible or even plausible.

For us, all ideas are equal, and as such, they deserve equal visibility on the site. We ensure this equality by highlighting the latest 22 ideas published on our home page and automatically sorting them in reverse chronological order on the search page.

All ideas on the site are public, allowing anyone to view them, contribute advice, and draw inspiration from the creativity of others.

Free Ideas

The purpose

The project aims to promote freedom of expression and digital inclusion, allowing creatives to share their ideas with the world, without being labeled or judged.

The ideal goal is to create an international and intercultural community of creative people who share their ideas and projects in a healthy and constructive way, even helping each other to implement their ideas.

This is why the site is in English: to allow anyone, regardless of their geographic location, language, or culture, to participate by posting their ideas.
As the site develops and expands, it is highly likely that sub-communities will also develop that post ideas in their native language, thus allowing even those who do not speak English to participate equally, without excluding anyone.

Graphic choices

The project's name, FreeIdeas, means "Free Ideas," and immediately captures the core concept: offering a space open to everyone's ideas.

The logo is simple and clean:
The word "Free" features letters colored in various shades of green, with a soft, harmonious font that conveys continuity and completeness;
the word "Ideas" uses a different shade of yellow for each letter, with a font reminiscent of a sketchy yet carefully crafted text, evoking creativity and originality.

The logo as a whole wants to communicate creativity, care, and hospitality: every idea, even if only sketched or incomplete, can find its place on the site.

The logo's colors were carefully chosen and have profound meanings.
Green evokes nature, a symbol of vitality, strength, and continuity, also suggesting the responsibility to care for it so it doesn't decay.
Yellow evokes gold, recalling what is precious, rare, and valuable, underscoring the importance of every idea.

Free Ideas

Graphic choices

The slogan we chose for the project aims to summarize the site's purpose:
'A place where your Ideas can be Free'. This short and concise phrase captures the site's purpose: to provide a place where anyone's ideas can be valued.
The word 'your' is in bold to emphasize that the site exists solely for the user, and that without creatives publishing their ideas, it would cease to have any purpose.

Free Ideas

The site – privacy

FreeIdeas values user privacy.
We allow users to choose whether they want their account to be public or private. All accounts are created privately, and only the user can decide to make it public. A public account has a dedicated page, which anyone can visit. Other users will see all your account information, including the email address used to create the account (which can be used as a private contact).
Private accounts will not have an accessible public page, and ideas they have published will not contain a link to the author's page.
Additionally, when performing a search from the dedicated page, public account pages may appear in the results list.

Free Ideas

The site – terms of use

FreeIdeas aims to create a healthy community accessible to as many people as possible.
To do this, we have decided to impose restrictions on what can be published on our site, trying not to excessively limit users' freedom of speech.
For example, we prohibit the publication of content that falls into at least one of the following categories: illegal; offensive; defamatory; discriminatory; infringing intellectual property or other rights; containing malware or malicious software; or impersonating another person or entity.
In the event of a violation of the Terms of Use, which the user accepts when creating an account, the FreeIdeas administrator may take action, ranging from censoring individual inappropriate content (for example, deleting a comment) to permanently and irreversibly deleting the account and all content published by the user.

Free Ideas The site – intellectual property

Freeldeas cares about the intellectual property of its users.
Many people have creative ideas they'd like to share with the world, yet they choose not to share them for fear of being stolen.
To prevent the theft of published ideas and to protect the intellectual property of creatives, Freeldeas requires that each published idea be licensed for third-party use.
When publishing an idea (or modifying it after publication), the author can choose whether to use our own custom-created license, the "Freeldeas License," or upload a customized PDF license.

The Freeldeas License is a non-commercial license that allows anyone to draw inspiration from the idea, use it, modify it, and share it solely for personal or educational purposes, provided that any derivative works are distributed under the same Freeldeas License, without further sublicenses. The license also protects the name, trademark, and any logos associated with the idea.

The site features a dark theme, featuring contrasting shades of black for the background and various variations of the classic golden yellow for text and highlighted objects.
The dark theme is automatically activated when the site is opened with a browser with the dark theme set, or it can be activated or deactivated at will using the appropriate button in the navigation bar.

The comments section, available at the bottom of each idea page, allows the community to discuss the idea, offer advice to the author, and possibly provide assistance in realizing the idea.

To prevent censorship, we have integrated an algorithm that allows, when a comment is deleted (a function available for comments posted by the user currently logged into the site), the deletion of the comment text and all information related to the account that posted it, without removing any subcomments.

The comments section allows a potentially unlimited number of comments and subcomments.

Free Ideas The site – further information

The notifications section, available by clicking the bell icon, allows you to view your latest notifications.
A grid appears with notifications sorted from newest to oldest, highlighting unread notifications. When you tap on a notification, all details (title, date, and description) are displayed. The user can delete notifications. Once opened, a notification is marked as read.
Notifications are sent, for example, in the following cases: if an idea you are following is updated; if a user you are following has published a new idea; if you have changed your account information; if the administrator has changed your account information; if the administrator has deleted an idea you were following.

The reserved area is the Freeldeas administrator's dashboard. Since logging in as an administrator gives you complete control over all site content, access to the private area is protected by a 5-password authentication. Furthermore, to create a new account that can be used to access the private area, you must have access to the server.

From the private area, the administrator can:

- View, delete, and edit each account's information (except the account password)
- View, delete, and edit each idea's information
- View, delete, and create notifications
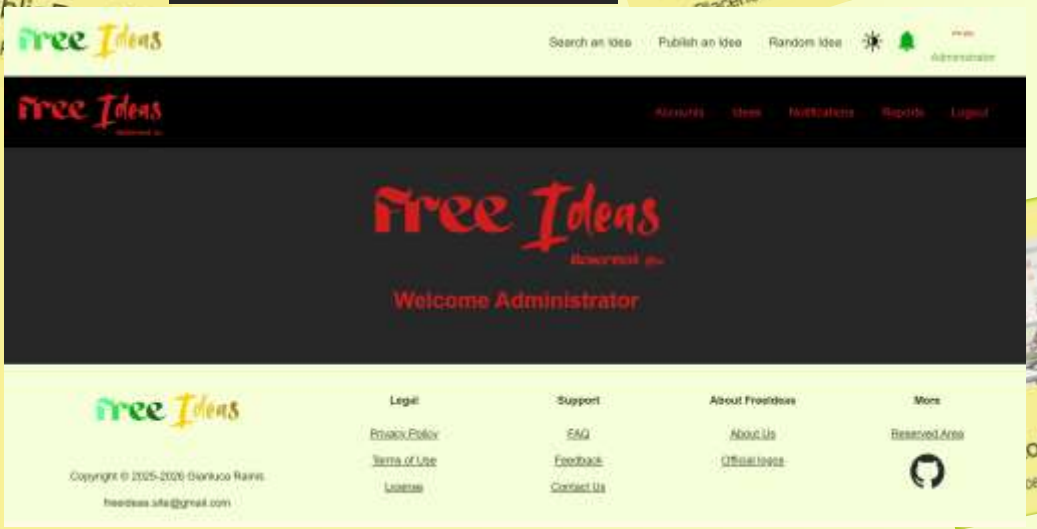
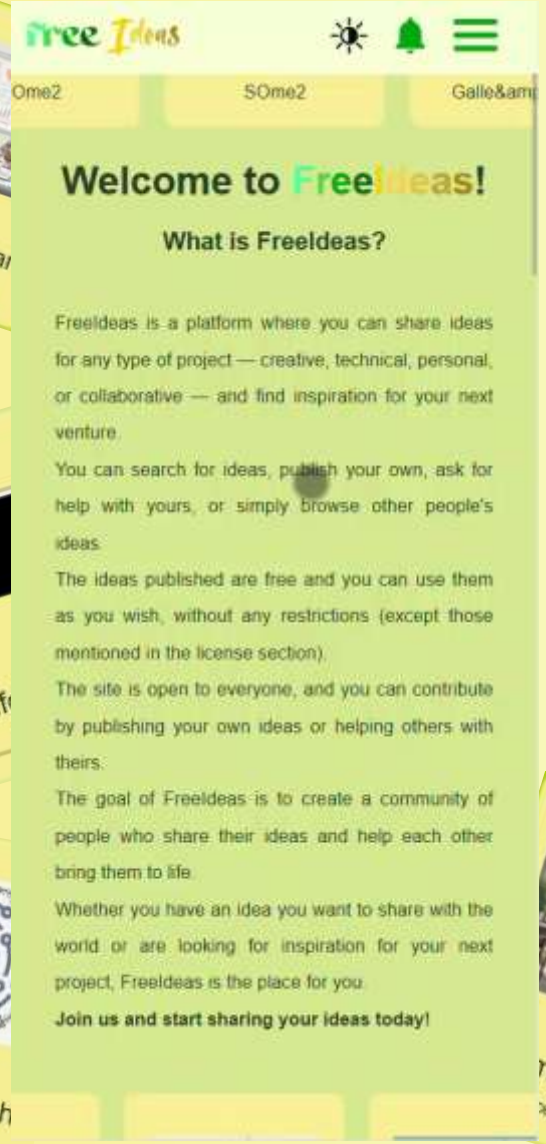
- View and delete reports (the information the user provides when reporting inappropriate content)



Free Ideas The site – further information



To allow everyone to access our site, we've made it responsive, meaning it can be used on any device by adapting the graphics to support different screen sizes.
Our site is fully functional and fully usable, without sacrificing any functionality, even on a phone or tablet.
Therefore, even users without a computer can use the site's services without losing anything.
